Contractors of the university can arrange a schedule to allow their employees to take turns to work any day in the week (to cover seven days) to prevent them from gathering in groups and to practice social distancing.

2. In case the workers are under a 14-day self-quarantine as requested by the university, they shall be entitled to receive a full wage from the company.

3. The companies must stress and ensure that their employees avoid visiting risky areas or crowded areas where there are large crowds of people. If non-compliance is reported, the university will request a replacement worker and will ignore No.2.

4. In the event of No.2, the university will continue the operation with the remaining manpower. Except when more workers are needed, the university shall discuss with the contractors about increasing the number of workers. Additional costs will then be compensated by the university.
